M'ANAM ("My Soul" in the English language)

The singers of this eight-voice group come from Iceland and Ireland, and their eclectic music explores the deep-rooted connections between these lands. M'ANAM encompass a vast range of musical experiences unified together by their compelling songs and performances. Originally part of the group ANÚNA, they are finding new ways to interpret ancient stories, bringing them into a contemporary world that has become so disconnected from them.

Their debut album features an eclectic and virtuosic sound unified together by some of the finest vocal sonorities committed to disc in recent years under the guidance of producer Brian Masterson and composer Michael McGlynn. Most of the album was recorded in the legendary Windmill Lane Studios in Dublin, Ireland. From an elegy for a 10th century Viking in Icelandic ("Deyr Fé") through to a riveting interpretation of the classic folk song "The Sheep Stealer" the album promises to be one of the musical highlights of 2019/2020.
